CURRENT NEWS

Post-Election Analysis: What it Means for Transportation

CONGRESSIONAL LEADERSHIP CHANGES

Leadership in both the House and Senate will remain Republican. Democrats had a net gain of one seat in the Senate and seven seats in the House – both far short of what would have been necessary for reclaiming the majority. However, there are some notable changes to those representatives who are expected to take leadership roles in the House and Senate.

Senate Leadership

Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) will take up the role of Senate Minority Leader, which is currently served by Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) who is retiring at the end of this term. Current Senate Majority Leader, Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) will maintain his leadership position under the new Congress.

Senate EPW

Sen. Tom Carper (D-DE), who is known for his relationships across the aisle, will replace current ranking member for the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), Barbara Boxer (D-CA) who is retiring. During committee mark-up of the FAST Act, Sen. Carper was one of the first to bring up the need to figure out how to pay for the transportation program and the importance of finding cost-effective solutions to fixing our transportation system. He also brings his expertise serving on the Finance Committee, which has jurisdiction over funding the transportation program.

Sen. Jim Inhofe (R-OK) is term-limited as chairman of EPW. The position is expected to go to Sen. John Barrasso (R-WY). Barrasso is from a rural state and is interested in addressing their unique transportation issues in any surface transportation bill. Local elected officials from Cheyenne, Wyoming have expressed interest in restoring the regional passenger rail service, which ended in 1997.

House Appropriations

While Rep. Hal Rogers (R-KY) won his reelection campaign, he is term-limited out of his role as Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. Rep. Rodney Frelinghuysen (R-NJ) is in line to assume this leadership position. Hailing from an area served by Amtrak along the Northeast Corridor, he may be friendlier to multi-modal transportation than his predecessor.

Senate Appropriations

Current Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee Sen. Thad Cochran (R-MI) is expected to maintain the majority leadership position. Current Vice Chairwoman, Sen. Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) is retiring and Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) will assume this democratic leadership position. Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-CA) will replace Leahy as ranking member on the Judiciary Committee.

ADMINISTRATIVE TRANSITION & DOT SECRETARY

Shortly after the election, Shirley Ybarra was identified to lead DOT “agency action” for the transition team. Ybarra is a former senior transportation policy analyst at the Reason Foundation and served as Secretary of Transportation for the Commonwealth of Virginia from 1998 to 2002.

However, on November 22, President-elect Donald Trump’s transition announced Nancy Butler was named to replace Ybarra to run the “landing team” at DOT. Butler is a former lobbyist for the engineering company AECOM and served as director of external affairs at DOT from 1985 to 1993.

A “landing team member” for DOT assumes the role of working with DOT staff and helping the incoming administration take over responsibilities – a role which can influence the president-elect’s plan for investing in infrastructure or other transportation policy issues.

DOT Secretary

Names for potential DOT Secretary picks have been surfacing, including Utah Speaker of the House Greg Hughes, who has served as chairman of the Utah Transit Authority. An early high-profile endorser of Trump, Speaker Hughes is known for overseeing the expansion of Salt Lake City’s regional transit network and increasing state transportation spending in 2015. If chosen, he would bring a unique voice for rural networks.

Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker is also under consideration for a cabinet position, including DOT. Under Walker’s leadership, Wisconsin turned back millions of federal funds for rail. Walker also scuttled the streetcar project in Milwaukee and pushed for an unpopular highway expansion in that city in spite of declining vehicle miles traveled.

Recently, former Democratic Representative Harold Ford, Jr. emerged as a potential candidate for transportation secretary or another cabinet post. Ford, who served five terms in Congress and is currently working at Morgan Stanley, could add a moderate Democrat to the Trump cabinet. Other names that have circulated for DOT Secretary include outgoing Rep. John Mica (R-FL), current Transportation and Infrastructure Committee Chairman Bill Shuster (R-PA), and outgoing Tulsa, Oklahoma Mayor Dewey Bartlett.

POLICY LIKELY IN THE NEW ADMINISTRATION’S FIRST 100 DAYS

One of President-elect Trump’s pledges for his first 100 days is to introduce and pass legislation that spurs $1 trillion in infrastructure investment over the course of 10 years without raising taxes. The infrastructure package, as referred to throughout the campaign, would include water infrastructure, the electricity grid, and other sectors beyond just transportation.

His campaign asserted that this bill would comprise of a “deficit-neutral system of infrastructure tax credits” that leverages private investments. New investments would focus on money-making infrastructure projects, such as airports and toll roads, that have a dedicated source of revenue. Following the election, his transition team revealed that the creation of an infrastructure bank would be a major focus to fund infrastructure investments.

While congressional Republicans generally seem open to Trump's developing proposal to invest in the nation's infrastructure over the next year, neither Speaker Paul Ryan nor Majority Leader Mitch McConnell have identified the issue as a priority for Congress. Additionally, House Transportation and Infrastructure Chairman Bill Shuster has previously voiced concerns over the establishment of an infrastructure bank – an idea that came up during the development of the FAST Act. Republicans may also be wary of an infrastructure plan that is similar to the economic stimulus plan advanced under the Obama Administration. Sen. McConnell voiced concerns that “a government spending program is not likely to solve the fundamental problem of growth.”

Incoming Minority Leader Sen. Schumer (D-NY) indicated that Democratic lawmakers are open to collaborating with the Trump administration on investing in infrastructure. However, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi has walked back from an initial optimistic tone after the election, writing in a letter to fellow legislators that they “must insist on a bill that puts good-paying jobs for workers first – not one that is a corporate tax break disguised as an infrastructure bill.”

Other priorities that the new administration will likely address in early 2017 include the Supreme Court nomination, repeal of the Affordable Care Act, and tax reform. These issues are expected to rank higher on Congress' agenda, which could delay prospects for an infrastructure package. In fact, tax reform would need to go first as it has been floated as a way to pay for the infrastructure package, either through bringing in more federal revenues or including tax incentives designed to support infrastructure.

Congressional Appropriations Update

After returning from the recess, Congress decided to pursue another continuing resolution (CR) in lieu of an end of year omnibus package.

The current CR that the government is operating under will keep the government open until December 9 and includes full FY2017 appropriations for Military Construction and Veterans Affairs. The new CR is expected to fund the government until March 31 at current FY2016 funding levels and task the new Congress with passing the remaining 11 FY2017 appropriations bills that Congress must still pass.

Special provisions, known as anomalies, that may be included in the new CR include:

- allowing the Pentagon to start a new contract for a range of top procurement items,
- an emergency supplemental bill to grant the Defense Department extra funds to fight Islamic State terrorists, or
- funding to address the drinking water crisis in Flint, Michigan.

Since this new CR will be more complex than what passed before the election, legislators will need time to work through all of the possible additions. They are expected to take up the CR during the week of December 5.

The CR the government is now operating under maintains discretionary funding at a rate of $1.067 trillion and abides by the funding levels set in the bipartisan two-year budget deal passed in October 2015. It also includes $1.1 billion to fight and prevent the spread of the Zika virus, $500 million in grants to help states recover from major disasters declared in 2016, and $37 million to help fight the opioid epidemic. T4America's summary of the current CR can be found here.

House and Senate Hearings on Automated Vehicles

HOUSE ENERGY AND COMMERCE HEARING

On November 15, the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Commerce, Manufacturing and Trade held a hearing on self-driving vehicles as part of their DISRUPTER series. Presided over by Subcommittee Chair Michael Burgess (R-TX) and Subcommittee Ranking Member Jan Schakowsky (D-IL), the hearing focused on the safety potential of automated vehicles (AV's) to save thousands of human lives; approximately 35,000 Americans die in automobile crashes each year. Members repeatedly cited that according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) "94% of automobile crashes can be attributed to human error."

Members also discussed the AV guidance that NHTSA released in September, which discusses 15 areas of safety concerns that AV manufacturers should address before releasing AV's. Many Republicans, including Sen. Burgess, praised the guidance, but expressed concern that states like California could codify NHTSA's voluntary guidance and that it may lead to a patchwork of state laws, which would hinder the deployment of AV's. One other area of concern for members was cyber security. Some members, including Sen. Schakowsky (D-IL), cited the Jeep hacking that occurred in July 2015 to raise concerns that NHTSA and the automobile industry are not doing enough to prevent future hacking of AV's.

SENATE APPROPRIATIONS HEARING

On November 16, the Senate Appropriations Transportation and Housing Subcommittee also held a hearing on self-driving vehicles, which Subcommittee Chairwoman, Senator Susan Collins (R-ME) and Subcommittee Ranking Member, Senator Jack Reed (D-RI) led.

Like the House hearing the day before, most of the discussion focused on the safety potential of AVs and the NHTSA AV guidance. However, Sen. Collins (R-ME) noted that Maine has the oldest population of any state in the United States and that AV's and ride-sharing technologies could help provide seniors, persons with disabilities and people without the means to get a car with access to essential services like health care, education, and jobs.

Members were especially interested in the potential timeline for the deployment of AV's. Panelists noted that there is no definite timeline at this point. However, a representative from the Alliance for Automobile Manufacturers indicated that AV's may be deployed in many urban areas by the early 2020's.

INVEST Funding Announced

On November 10, the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) announced an applied research funding opportunity for transportation agencies to use the Infrastructure Voluntary Evaluation Sustainability (INVEST) tool. Through this program FHWA aims to support projects that can demonstrate sustainability improvements through use of the INVEST tool.

State DOTs, MPOs, and federal land management agencies are eligible to receive funding and FHWA anticipates making four to six awards of $20,000 to $50,000 each. Letters of interest must be submitted by January 5. T4America's full summary is available here.
